John Landers, the Merrill logger, was in Rhinelander last Thursday.

Dr. Stone was at Tomahawk Lake Saturday on professional business.

Attorney George O'Connor, of Crandon, was a fair visitor yesterday.

Foreman Vantlander and wife came over from Jeffris to attend the fair Tuesday.

Mrs. Walter McLaughlin returned to Rib Lake Friday, after spending two weeks here with her relatives.

Jackson Bizzard, a representative of the American Type Founders, of Chicago, called on the printers here Monday.

C. H. Hartely, of Kaukauna, division superintendent of the Chicago & North-Western road, was in the city last week.

A party consisting of Chas. McIndoe, Sam Higgins and Leslie Beers made the trip from Tomahawk Lake to this city by boat Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hemis and daughters, of Texas, arrived in the city today for a visit at the residence of Paul Browne.

Mrs. George McLaughlin arrived home Sunday morning from an extended visit with relatives in the southern part of the state.

Two new ten foot plate glass show cases were received at the clothing store of H. Lewis yesterday. They will contain gents' furnishing goods.

Dr. Keith was a Minneapolis visitor last week. He was accompanied by Mrs. Keith on his return. The latter had been visiting relatives at Stillwater several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. James W. McCloskey and son, of Johnsonburg, Penn., arrived in the city Tuesday for a visit at the home of Mrs. McCloskey's sister, Mrs. John Rezin.

J. A. Cushman went to Merrill Friday to visit his daughter, Mrs. Rolfe and family, who will remove to Idaho next week, expecting to make that state their home in the future.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Billings and son-in-law, Sam Conno, are enjoying an outing at the Berry Banks on the Wisconsin river. They went out Saturday and will remain a couple of weeks.

A. J. Eldridge and D. A. Robertson, of Chicago, are at the fair this week dealing out free samples of Lion coffee to the thirsty ones. The coffee tastes good and those who have tried it speak well of it.

Dick Dugan returned from Merrill last week, where he has been head sawing in the Anson mill at that place during the past three months. He resumed his old position in the Brown-Robbins mill this week.

E. B. LeFevre was down from Tomahawk Lake Monday. He reported the death at the above place Saturday of Mrs. Sam Brown, wife of one of the carriage riders in the mill of the Lake Shore Lumber Co.

Charley Plant and Jack Duce returned from Merrill Saturday where they have been at work since the destruction of the Brown-Robbins saw mill here by fire. They will fill their old positions in the new mill next week.

Capt. J. T. Rosborough and his wife and daughter, of Texarkana, Texas, are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Browne this week. Capt. Rosborough is a veteran of the civil war, having served on the Confederate side. This is his first visit north in thirty years. He is a prominent saw mill man.

Capt. Robt. J. Bates, of Ironwood, was one of the visitors at the bicycle races Tuesday. Capt. Bates, it will be remembered, was at the head of Co. H, 34th Michigan volunteers when the boys passed through here on their way home from the Santiago trenches a year ago. He is supervisor of the U. S. Census for the Twelfth Congressional district of Michigan.

E. S. Shepard has received one of the finest boats brought to this section. It arrived here last week and is a dandy. It is 15 feet long with 72 inch beam and is constructed after the fashion of a birch canoe as to ribs and sheathing and covered with canvas filled with aluminum dust and oil making it as smooth as glass and almost as hard. The boat was conspicuously displayed at the fair together with a number of rare and curious articles which attracted a great deal of attention.

Mrs. J. Wilson is visiting her relatives at Waupaca.

Dr. Walter O'Connor, of Tony, is in Rhinelander this week.

John B. McIndoe visited friends at Sault Ste Marie, Mich., over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. LaSalle and daughter Ethel went out to their cottage at Lake George Saturday and spent a portion of this week there.

Miss Maud Sanford, of Merrill, who has been spending the summer with her sister, Mrs. Ed. Rogers in this city, departed today for Brantwood, Price Co., where she has engaged to teach school the coming year.

F. M. Mason and daughters returned Monday from a week's camp at Lake Thompson. They were accompanied by Mrs. Myrtle Hamilton, who landed a fifteen pound muskallonge early Monday morning. The party enjoyed good luck.

A nine and one-half pound baby boy arrived at the home of H. W. Gillett Tuesday. The father is naturally proud of the new addition to his family but states that the young fellow will not learn the barber's trade.

Miss Catherine Nash, sister of Miss Margaret Nash, has accepted a position in the department store of C. E. Crusoe & Co. as saleslady. She arrived Saturday from the east, where she has been spending some time, and entered upon her duties Monday.

If you wish to improve the quality of your bread use the celebrated Yeast Foam. Nothing like it for producing a light, sweet, nutritious loaf of bread. It will hold its moisture and nutty flavor longer than bread raised with any other yeast put on the market. Try it.

Miss Blanche Barton, of Waupaca, who graduated from the High School in this city with the class of '97, was married at her parents home in Waupaca last Wednesday. The groom is a prosperous young business man of Scandinavia. The bride has the well wishes of many friends in this city for her future happiness.

The foot ball team started in training last week and all are getting down to work in good earnest. The first game of the season will be played here a week from Saturday, September 27, with the eleven from West Superior, and a contest is looked for that will gladden the eyes of the enthusiast. Remember the date and figure on going.

The rural comedy, Aunt Jerusha, will be presented at the opera house Monday evening, Sept. 18. The play contains the most interesting and intelligible plot, but it is not allowed to interfere with the fun which is said to be in abundance. During the run of the play some startling scenes and situations are introduced. Clever specialties and the celebrated Bitterroot Farm Quartette, makes this one the greatest rural comedy dramas one the road and will be appreciated by local play-goers.

Mrs. W. B. LaSalle and Mrs. Chas. Chafee entertained a small company of ladies at the Rapids House Friday afternoon at a Thimble Bee. The guests of honor were Mesdames Anderson, Boyington, Walton and Ball, of Stevens Point. A delectable luncheon was served in the dining room at 5 o'clock, and a thoroughly enjoyable afternoon was spent by those who attended. The guests were Mrs. W. P. Ball, Mrs. R. V. Day, Mrs. A. D. Daniels, Mrs. J. D. Day, Mrs. Mary Day, Mrs. S. H. Alban, Mrs. Amos, Mrs. W. E. Brown, Mrs. E. O. Brown, Mrs. A. W. Brown, Mrs. Paul Browne, Mrs. A. W. Shelton, Mrs. Kate McIndoe, Mrs. F. L. C. W. Russell, of Appleton, was in the city Monday soliciting orders from wearers of male apparel.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Cinqmars, who have spent some time on their farm near Bass Lake, returned to their home in this city Saturday.

Mrs. M. A. Rogers was seriously ill with a severe attack of the grip at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Porter Foster, last week, but at this writing is much better.

S. H. Ashton accompanied Dr. T. B. Welch to Neeshah last week where several days were put in shooting chickens. He returned Tuesday and reports having had a very nice time.

W. D. Harrigan and wife returned Saturday from Milwaukee where they spent a portion of last week. While there Mr. Harrigan purchased two tracts of pine located on the Manitowish waters.

Prof. W. W. Daniels, wife and son, arrived in the city Tuesday noon from Bayfield and are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Brown. Prof. Daniels conducted a summer school at Madison this year and was north with his family enjoying an outing.

E. H. Forbes, of Sault Ste Marie, Mich., and Charles Worth, of Antigo, both leading representatives for the big horse firm of D. Hammel & Co., Appleton, were in attendance at the fair this week. Both men had horses entered which took part in the free-for-all trot and pace today.

Mrs. Byron Clothier and her little daughter, Lillian, arrived home Saturday night from Crookston, Minn. They have been spending the summer at that place with Mr. Clothier, her husband, who is in the employ of Shovelan & Carpenter Lumber Co. Mrs. Clothier stopped off at Minneapolis and attended the State Fair.

W. H. Chapman was down from Tomahawk Lake last week on business.

Ed. Cain and wife and Mrs. Geo. Dean returned from a week's outing at Lake George Monday. They occupied the cottage of Dean & Parker.

Mrs. F. C. Dumbleck, of Kansas City, wife of the General Freight agent of the Kansas City and Fort Scott Railway, accompanied by her daughter, arrived in this city Saturday and are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Browne.

George Whitney came down from Nash, Bayfield Co., Tuesday for a visit with relatives and friends. George now runs an engine on the Ashland, Siskowit & Iron River Railroad and has a nice position. The road is over twenty miles in length and is owned by Ashland men.

E. S. Shepard returned from a trip south Saturday morning and while on the train made things interesting for a party of hunters who were on their way north after game. The sportsmen were heavily armed, shooting irons and knives being everywhere in evidence. Nearly everyone knows that 'Gene can imitate the bark of a dog to perfection but the hunters didn't and when a low growl came from under the seat of one of the ferocious looking men he looked more than anxious and wildly interrogated his companions as to the whereabouts of the cur. The threatening sound seemed to come from beneath the seat occupied by Shepard who was very much interested in a newspaper and apparently not at all disturbed. After a few minutes quiet the hunters forgot the dog but not for long. Again came the angry snarl from under the seat, this time dangerously near the man who first was alarmed by the noise. This time the fellow jumped wildly to his feet and looked more than angry at Shepard, who paid not the slightest attention to his trepidation. The man was thoroughly annoyed and not a little alarmed and his discomfort had been communicated to his companions. A few minutes later, when a loud snarl came from near the man's leg and he felt a tug at his trousers, he jumped high in the air and let a whoop of fear out of him that was involuntary and genuine. It was too much and he told 'Gene he wanted the dog put out. The roar of laughter that followed shook the car.

DREYFUS CONVICTED.

Court-Martial Finds Him Guilty of Treason.

Sentenced to Serve Ten Years in Prison—The Condemned Man Thinks He Will Be Pardoned, However—Indignation at the Result.

Rennes, Sept. 11.—Dreyfus has been found guilty and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment.

The court stood 3 to 2 for the condemnation of the prisoner, but found extenuating circumstances existed.

The crowd outside the court soon greeted the verdict with cheers for the army.

When the verdict was read to Dreyfus he gave not the slightest sign of emotion, did not utter a word and marched back to prison like an automaton.

Dreyfus' Last Protest.

At the conclusion of speeches by M. Demange and Maj. Carrière, Col. Jouaust, president of the court, asked Dreyfus if he had anything to add in his behalf. The prisoner rose and in a voice choked with emotion declared he had only one thing to say, but of that he was perfectly assured. He said:

"I affirm before my country and before the army that I am innocent. My sole aim has been to save the honor of my name, for five years of the most awful torture, but today, at last, I feel assured that I am about to attain my desire, through your loyalty and justice."

Col. Jouaust—Have you finished, Dreyfus?

Dreyfus—Yes, Mr. President.

The court then retired to deliberate, and the prisoner left the hall, never to return, as, in accordance with the law, the verdict was rendered in his absence.

Verdict Rendered.

The ringing of a bell announced the entry of the judges, an officer ordered "Carry arms," and "Present arms," the rattle of rifles followed, and then Col. Jouaust marched in, saluted, and laid his kept on the table. The other judges did likewise, the gendarmes shouted "Silence," and the stillness of death fell on the audience who were waiting heart in mouth for the announcement of Dreyfus' fate.

Col. Jouaust then began reading the judgment, which opened with the question referred to the judges by the court of cassation: "Was Dreyfus guilty of entering into machinations to send secret documents to a foreign power?" He then gave the answer that the court, by a majority of five to two, found Dreyfus guilty.

The gendarmes then closed around the audience and pressed them outside. Not a cry or a word was raised by anyone.

Everything passed off with perfect calm.

As the people emerged the gendarmes kept them moving away from the court. The small crowd of people outside cheered for the army, but the gendarmes did not interfere and there was not the slightest disorder.

Dreyfus Appears Unmoved.

The judgment was read to Dreyfus in an adjoining little room by the clerk of the court, M. Coups. Dreyfus listened impassively, did not give the slightest sign of emotion, did not utter a word, and marched back to prison like an automaton.

It is understood Dreyfus will be sent to Fort Corte, in the island of Corsica.

A large crowd, which the police kept moving, waited around the square in which the telegraph office and the principal cafes are situated. When the people learned the court had been out an hour, it was argued that this meant a disagreement in favor of Dreyfus. The first indication to these watchers was when a soldier on a bicycle came tearing along as fast as he could from the lycee towards the artillery barracks.

Dreyfus Holds Up Well.

Rennes, Sept. 11.—Dreyfus passed a quiet night and rose when his orderly brought him water at five o'clock Sunday morning, just as he did during the trial, when it was necessary. Mme. Dreyfus and Mathieu Dreyfus, his brother, visited him during the course of the afternoon. His brother subsequently leaving for Paris. The application to the court of revision was taken to him at noon by Maître Laborie's assistant and he signed it. He has spoken but little, though he has seemed in better spirits than might have been anticipated. The meeting with his wife was naturally very affecting, but both held up as well as possible.

Expects to Be Released.

He is convinced that the ten years' imprisonment to which he is sentenced will be wiped out by the five years of solitary seclusion he has undergone on Devil's Island, and he expects to be released by October 15, which will be five years from the date of his former condemnation. He is so sanguine that he has made an extraordinary request of his wife for a novel to read in the meantime, explaining that his mind is so shaken and weighed down by recent events that he needs to divert his thoughts and try to get all the recollections of the last three months out of his mind. He thinks that reading a novel will afford the desired mental repose and keep him from brooding.

Quiet in Paris.

Paris, Sept. 11.—The day has been one of absolute quiet, with no public excitement, not even in the Rue de Chabrol. There was a rainfall in the afternoon and the streets were practically deserted. Slight disturbances occurred yesterday at Mareilles and Delfort after the verdict of the Dreyfus court-martial was published. The demonstrators stoned the residence of Jacques Dreyfus, brother of the condemned, at Delfort, breaking the windows and otherwise damaging the structure. Many persons were arrested in both places.

BOERS TALK PEACE.

At the Same Time They Are Hastily Encamped in Preparing for War with Great Britain.

Pretoria, Sept. 11.—The News prints an official statement from F. W. Reitz, secretary of state of the South African republic, in which Mr. Reitz says:

"The government considers that three courses are disclosed by the communications of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain, the British secretary of state for the colonies. The first is a joint commission of inquiry; the second is a commission of delegates from both governments to discuss technicalities, and the third is a conference at Cape Town."

Secretary Reitz adds that the Transvaal government now agrees to the second proposition and invites Great Britain to define the constitution of the commission suggested and the place of meeting.

Pretoria, Sept. 11.—In the course of an interview State Attorney Smuts said that the Transvaal, having withdrawn its offer of a five years' franchise, the condition thereto attached—namely, the relinquishment of suzerainty—also falls to the ground. He understands the Transvaal's last dispatch as an acceptance of the proposal for a joint commission of inquiry. "The Transvaal," he said, "is anxious to terminate the tension existing, because trade is stagnant and the country is being ruined. Hence the Transvaal has a greater interest than has the British government in bringing about a settlement." He declared that he fully believed the British government desired a peaceful solution of the difficulty, and expressed the opinion that the Transvaal's last dispatch would further that end.

London, Sept. 11.—It is understood that Gen. Sir Redvers Buller will start for Cape Town next Saturday. The Indian authorities are chartering steamers to transport troops to South Africa as rapidly as possible. Although the aspect of affairs is more peaceful, the special dispatches from Johannesburg report the greatest anxiety there. Fifteen hundred people left the town on Saturday, and it is proposed to transfer the business of the stock exchange to Cape Town. The Johannesburg town council is appealing to the government for power to start relief works to meet the exceptional distress.

A dispatch from Bloemfontein reports the distribution of arms and a considerable exodus to Cape Colony. According to this correspondent, the Boers are massing on the frontiers and there is no abatement of war preparations in the Transvaal.

London, Sept. 11.—The troops going to South Africa as the result of the decision of the cabinet council to send 10,000 soldiers there, will proceed to Natal, bringing the total number of men in that colony up to 15,000. Reinforcements numbering 5,000 men will be drawn from India.

PLUNGE OF A TRAIN.

Goes Through a Trestle on a Southern Railway—Four Men Killed—Collision in Pennsylvania.

Columbia, S. C., Sept. 11.—Saturday night 200 feet of trestle on the Columbia, Newberry & Laurens road over Broad river, near this city, gave way under a train load of granite. Several cars and an engine fell 50 feet into the water. The following were killed: Engineer Dick Weatherly, of Columbia; Silas Rennie, fireman, of Greenville, S. C.; Stewart Martin, a negro, of Abston, S. C.; unidentified man with head severed from body. William Bates, an extra fireman, went down with the wreck, but was dug out from under tons of granite without a scratch. James Watson, superintendent of explosives at the granite quarry, jumped from the train and landed 50 feet below unhurt. The bridge had just been completed and was pronounced in first-class condition.

Erie, Pa., Sept. 11.—A head-on collision on the Philadelphia & Erie railroad, 70 miles east of this city, at Tiora, Sunday resulted in the death of one man and the injury of three. H. J. Gerlach, engineer of Erie, was killed. The injured are: W. G. Schaaf, fireman, of Erie, both legs crushed, will die; John Fabey, brakeman, Erie, bruised; J. K. Neill, brakeman, badly bruised. Engineer Gerlach failed to see a red target and crashed into another freight that was about to take a siding to allow him to pass. The crew of the west-bound train escaped by jumping.

ANTI-TRUST CONVENTION.

Gathering of Governors and Attorneys General to Be Held in St. Louis, September 20.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 11.—The anti-trust convention of governors and attorneys general, called by Gov. Sayres to meet in St. Louis, will convene there on September 20. Gov. Sayres and a number of state politicians who intend being in attendance as spectators will leave here Saturday night, September 16, for St. Louis. It can be stated authoritatively that no programme of arrangement as to who will speak or what will be the policy of the meeting has been mapped out. Up to the present time Gov. Sayres has not received a single letter from any governor expressing a desire to outline any policy in advance, or announcing that he proposed to make a speech upon that occasion.

From Arctic Regions.

Briggs, N. P., Sept. 11.—The Peary-Harmsworth steamer Windward, Capt. John Bartlett, from Etah, North Greenland, August 26, arrived here Sunday, reporting all well on board. She will be followed in a week by the Peary Arctic club's steamer Diana, Capt. Samuel W. Bartlett, also from Etah. The Windward reports that all on board the Diana were well at the time the vessels parted. Lieut. Peary and the sledge parties were in the field almost continuously from October, 1898, to August of this year, and have effected an extraordinary amount of important work.

A TRAIN ROBBED.

Bandits Blow Open Express Compartment's Strong Box in Arizona, and Secure $10,000.

Penson, A. T., Sept. 11.—Four masked men held up Southern Pacific train No. 10, west-bound, at Cashie station, shortly before midnight. They open Wells, Fargo & Co.'s through-money safe with dynamite, took the treasure it contained and escaped to the mountains. The robbery was the boldest of all the famous train robberies of the west. Not a shot was fired and no one received the slightest injury.

Cashie station is a lonely place on the alkali flat, ten miles west of Willcox, and 22 miles west of Penson. The station, freight house and section house form the only relief to the monotony of a vast rolling plain. Just as the train stopped at the station the four masked men appeared. One mounted the engine cab and covered Engineer Richardson with a revolver, while two stood guard at the side door of the express car. The fourth guarded the coaches and sleepers from a point at the rear of the express car.

One of the two men that stood at the door of the express car jumped aboard and ordered "Hands up." He then told Express Messenger Adair to leave the car. As Adair jumped to the ground the other bandit searched him for arms. In a hip pocket he found $25.

"That's my private property," said Adair.

"You may have it; we don't want your money," said the bandit.

The man at the rear of the car uncoupled it, and at a signal the engineer was ordered to pull out. The express car was taken westward a mile or more, then the through-express safe was thrown out to the ground and blown open by dynamite. All bills and gold were taken. Messenger Adair refused to say how much the safe contained, but it is estimated that the sum was exceedingly large. One railroad man expressed the opinion that the strong box might have contained close to $100,000. Several thousand silver dollars in the car were untouched by the robbers. None of the passengers were molested. After the contents of the safe had been taken care of the unknown quartette allowed Engineer Richardson to run back to the train. Then they disappeared on foot to a point where their horses were tethered and rode away.

JAMES B. EUSTIS IS DEAD.

His Ambassador to France Expires of Pneumonia at Newport, R. I.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 11.—James B. Eustis, ambassador to France during the second Cleveland administration and formerly a senator from Louisiana, died at his summer home in this city at eight o'clock Saturday night of pneumonia. Mr. Eustis was taken ill on Wednesday, but the local physician #### after an examination thought the trouble to be heart failure.

The funeral will take place this evening at 7:30 o'clock from the home of the deceased on Eustis avenue. A short Episcopal service will be conducted by Rev. Henry Morgan Store, rector of Trinity church, and then the body will be taken by boat to New York, and thence to Louisville, Ky., where it will be buried beside the remains of Mrs. Eustis.

James B. Eustis was born in New Orleans, La., in 1824. His mother was a Louisiana, but his father was from New England. After being graduated from the Harvard law school in

WISCONSIN STATE NEWS

Sensational Report.
The state board of control has submitted a sensational report to Gov. Scofield on its inspection of the Wisconsin veterans' home at Waupaca. It charges that Treasurer Roberts, trustee of the home, refuses to allow an examination of his books; that with the exception of $65.72 no interest has been paid on a large contingent fund kept in Roberts' bank, the National Bank of Waupaca, and that two trustees of the home wrote part of the insurance on the buildings. The home is under the management of the Wisconsin I. A. R., and is supported by state funds.

Death of Black Hawk.
Black Hawk, the most noted of the chiefs of the Wisconsin Winnebago Indians, died in the town of Blackway, aged 90 years. Black Hawk has been well known in the western part of Wisconsin for the last 50 years and was always the friend of the whites. By general consent of the tribe, Thomas R. Roddy, formerly of Black River Falls, now a resident of Chicago, will succeed to the chieftainship under the title of White Buffalo.

Will Resume Cash Payment.
It is the intention of nearly all lumbermen in Oconto and vicinity to revert to the cash payment system in settling with men employed in the logging woods. At a meeting recently held it was the consensus of opinion that the time check policy would result in great inconvenience in obtaining a sufficient number of men to do the work, for jobs and money are too plentiful these days.

Asks for Contributions.
Gov. Scofield has issued a proclamation to the people of the state asking them to contribute to the relief of the Porto Rico sufferers. The proclamation is issued in response to the appeal received from the secretary of war. The proclamation quotes a part of the appeal and instructs the people to send money contributions to the National Bank of North America of New York.

Fumes Were Fatal.
Three patients at the Marathon county asylum in Waupun, while working in a silo, were overcome with carbonic acid fumes and were dead before they could be rescued. Superintendent Head, of the asylum, was overcome while attempting to rescue the men and was dragged out almost dead. The dead men are Frank Crowder, Gustave Gunderson and William Radtke.

Makes Appointment.
Gov. Scofield announced the following appointments:
Harry S. Bracken, member board of trustees of Milwaukee asylum for chronic insane; J. H. McDonald, of Superior, timber inspector for the Wisconsin district; Dr. Parham, of Manitowish, member of the state board of dental examiners; Labor Commissioner Erickson, who was offered a position on the United States census, has declined the appointment.

Will Buy from Farmers.
The American Tobacco company, commonly known as the trust, will hereafter buy leaf direct from Wisconsin farmers. A material increase in prices is expected. The trust will erect a mammoth depot in Madison for sorting and storing its purchases. This move will drive many small dealers out of the field.

Guessed in Black.
Miss Belle Stebbins and Douglas Newell were married at the home of the bride's father in Kenosha. The Old Maids' league, of which the bride is a member, attended the wedding in a body, all gowned in black as typical of the sorrow they felt at the loss of one member from the association.

The News Condensed.
The fire which threatened to destroy the entire business section of Hortonville was checked after three buildings were burned. The loss will not reach beyond $100,000.

By a decision of the state supreme court Emma Blessing Ludington, widow of Harrison Ludington, Jr., is given a one-sixth interest in the estate of Harrison Ludington, former governor of Wisconsin, which is valued at $1,500,000.

The shops of the Wisconsin Central railroad at Stevens Point and Wauchesa are to be moved to Fond du Lac.

The sixth annual fair of the Okauch Agricultural society will be held September 25, 26 and 27 on the Okauch fair grounds.

The premium list of the forty-first annual fair of the Washington County Agricultural society has been issued. The fair will be held in West Land September 19, 20 and 21.

The total valuation of all the property in Fond du Lac figures $3,878,531.52, an increase of $161,542.75 over 1924.

The city clerk of Oshkosh finds that the property valuation is $9,262,534, an increase over 1923 of $22,501.

Peter McMillan, who owns a farm about ten miles north of Two Rivers, has discovered that the black sand which is constantly washed up by waves of Lake Michigan at his place is valuable. It is used by match manufacturers to line outside strips on match boxes for igniting the matches.

Dr. May Reid, of Racine, has fallen heir to $249,000 by the death of her aunt in Norway, Pa.

James Kierland died in Milwaukee, aged 81 years. He was one of the wealthiest men in the city. He was a member of the territorial legislature.

Harry H. Boardman, deputy county treasurer and son-in-law of County Treasurer Gronquist, was arrested in Kenosha on a charge of embezzling $2,500 of the county funds.

Frank Robinson, an engineer of the Milwaukee road for 25 years, died in Mazomanie, aged 63.

The E. L. Ellis company in Milwaukee has granted a uniform increase to employees working by the hour of five per cent.

WILL BE A BIG SHOW.

National Export Exposition to Be Formally Opened in Philadelphia Next Thursday.

Philadelphia, Sept. 11.—The National Export Exposition will be opened at noon on Thursday next and remain open, Sundays excepted, until November 30. Less than five months ago the first spadeful of dirt was turned up for the foundation for the superb buildings which have since been completed at a cost of more than a million dollars. The vast auditorium, in which the opening ceremonies will be held, is a striking illustration of the largeness of the undertaking. Although a magnificent music hall, with an amphitheater large enough to accommodate an audience of 6,000 people, it forms but a part of the enormous main building of the exposition. The stage alone of the auditorium has a capacity for 600 singers. In addition to space for public speakers and the caring for a very large number of distinguished persons and guests, who will be present on the opening day and upon other occasions during the progress of the exhibition.

The opening ceremonies on Thursday, which are to be held in the chief structure of the exposition, will be attended with much solemnity and interest. The governor of the state, mayor of the city, and representatives of the government at Washington and many of the greatest nations of the world will be present, and that widely popular organization, the United States Marine band, together with 600 trained singers, under the leadership of Prof. Rosevick, are preparing a musical programme which will extend through a large part of the day. At present arranged, President Willmore, of the Exposition association, will turn over the exposition to Gov. Stone, who is in turn to deliver it into the custody of the mayor of the city, and Congressman Hepburn will accept a joint supervision of the enterprise on behalf of President McKinley, thus establishing it upon the broad basis of city, state and national endorsement. The addresses and ceremonies of the day, which will be participated in by Archbishop Ryan, of this Catholic diocese, and other prominent clergymen, will be of the most interesting character.

The public will find on the opening of the exhibition on Thursday a presentation of American trade movements and mechanical and art enterprises of a most surprising and interesting character. The display of manufactured products which have a present or contemplated foreign market is very complete, and the methods of manufacture, showing the progress in the making and completion of a needle or a cuff button or of a giant locomotive or a great bridge, will be everywhere before the eye in varied and almost endless succession. The beauty and extent of the buildings themselves, as now completed, compare with the best product of the Centennial exposition or the Chicago world's fair.

On the esplanade the public will find a great variety of amusements, rivaling in some respects the famous Midway of the Chicago fair. This includes a Chinese village of 120 persons and all the variety of Chinese religion and domestic life. There are also such things as an oriental theater and Indian village, an old southern plantation, the Barney stone and the blue Killarney lakes and many picture shows and novelties of all kinds.

The international commercial congress, which is to be opened in the exposition auditorium about the 10th of October under the supervision of Director Wilson, will be represented, in addition to the presence of President Diaz of Mexico, by 20 foreign governments and more than 125 foreign chambers of commerce have named delegates. The sessions of the congress will continue for about three weeks.

FILIPINOS USE CANNON.

Make Early Morning Attack on Santa Rita, Zamboanga and San Antonio.

Manila, Sept. 11.—A force of 450 rebels, with one cannon, attacked Santa Rita early Saturday morning and simultaneously Zamboanga and San Antonio were attacked by bodies of rebels numbering about 60 men.

All the attacks were repulsed without loss to the Americans.

Col. Bell and his regiment, while attempting to take the rebels in the rear, met two small patrols and succeeded in capturing a rebel captain, a lieutenant and six privates.

A Filipino who has arrived here from the Visayas islands says the Victoriano and Magu, a prominent and wealthy lawyer of Iloilo, being forced by public opinion to declare his politics, has joined the rebels.

The inhabitants of Santa Barbara, the rebel headquarters in the island of Panay, have abandoned the town, fearing a bombardment of the place by the United States battleship Oregon.

WILL NOT RESIGN.

Paris, Sept. 11.—A semi-official note was issued emphatically denying the report that Gen. de Gallifet, the minister of war, had tendered his resignation and saying that proceedings would be taken against the paper for publishing the report.

FILIPINOS' MAUSER BULLETS.

To the small caliber of their urgent manners many lives are owed, for the bullets bore a clean little hole, rarely fracturing a limb, and it takes a rather shot through the skull to kill. A half-dozen men shot through the brain with Mausers have survived.

A Montana boy was struck in the back of the outer angle of the left eye, the bullet passing through his skull and making its exit in the same locality on the other side. He lost the sight of one eye and though the other may follow he will recover his usual health.

FINISH THEIR WORK.

Col. Shaw Elected Commander-in-Chief at the Final Session of the G. A. R.

Philadelphia, Sept. 8.—The thirty-third national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic came to an end Thursday night. The election of a commander-in-chief, which it was supposed, would be settled only after a warm contest, was conducted and carried out in the most peaceable manner imaginable. Col. Albert D. Shaw, of Watertown, N. Y., was unanimously elected to the highest office of the organization, after Judge Leo Cassieur, of St. Louis, had declined to be a candidate.

Irving Robbins, of Indianapolis, was elected senior commander in chief, and M. Minton, of Louisville, Ky., was chosen junior vice commander. William H. Baker, of Lynn, Mass., was elected surgeon general.

Jacob L. Grimm, of Maryland, was elected chaplain in chief.

The report of the pension committee which was Wednesday re-committed with instructions to the committee to embody therein the desires of the encampment relative to the pension laws, was again presented. The report was accompanied by resolutions drafted by the committee and the encampment at once adopted them unanimously.

Their were as follows:

"Your committee on pensions respectfully presents this memorial report pursuant to the instructions of the encampment."

"We respectfully direct attention to section 11 of the revised statutes of the United States which reads as follows: 'The commission of pensions shall perform under the direction of the secretary of the interior such duties in the execution of pension and bounty laws as may be prescribed by the president.'"

"Resolved, That this encampment respectfully represents to the president its earnest conviction that rule 254 now in practical effect in the administration of claims for pensions, under section 2, of the act of June 27, 1891, in the pension bureau, works grave injustice to worthy ex-soldiers and ex-seafarers, and we express the hope that you will find it consistent with your duties as an executive officer to appropriate this report and re-establish the operation of rule 104, formulated and put into effect soon after the passage of this act, unquestionably responsive to public sentiment and based upon sound legal propositions, in a word, the simple expression of the letter and spirit of the law."

"Resolved, That this committee is hereby authorized and directed in the event that it is determined that relief may not be accorded by the administrative officers of the government to present to congress a request for the amendment of the law in such form as to make certain the true intent of the statute, as we believe it can be construed as herein presented."

Philadelphia, Sept. 9.—The veterans who attended the encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic Friday afternoon witnessed a naval review held on the Delaware river. The ships reviewed were those of the North Atlantic squadron, composed of the flagship New York, cruiser Brooklyn, battleships Indiana, Massachusetts and Texas.

The official reviewing party was composed of Gov. Stone and staff, Pennsylvania; Mayor Ashbridge, of this city; Capt. James H. Sarsse, United States navy; Senator Penrose, James Latta and Maj. Richard S. Cullum, of the G. A. R.

After the review was over Gov. Stone and his staff were taken on board the New York, where Admiral Sampson tendered them an informal reception.

Camp James A. Sexton, in Fairmont park, in which nearly 10,000 veterans had been sheltered during the encampment, came to an end at four o'clock Friday afternoon.

Scatter the Enemy.

Manila, Sept. 8.—Capt. Butler with three companies of the Third Infantry, a detachment of cavalry and one gun sailed upon a reconnaissance into a body of rebels at San Rafael. The Americans scattered the enemy and captured seven prisoners, five rifles and 200 rounds of ammunition. They also destroyed the rice stored in seven warehouses.

Three Miners Killed.

Fairmount, W. Va., Sept. 2.—Three miners, Fred Hamilton, Clarence Hardesty and Elza Powers, lost their lives in Highland mines, near here, the result of a powder explosion, followed by a fire started by the falling of a lamp in a keg of powder. The victims were first hurled against the walls and were then burned to death.

Burned Himself to Death.

Waterloo, Ia., Sept. 8.—John Miner, a farmer, living two miles east of Waterloo, committed suicide Thursday afternoon by locking himself in a barn and setting it on fire. He was seen to fall into the flames. Bystanders were unable to rescue him on account of the intense heat. The body burned to ashes.

Illnesses for President.

Porto Plata, Santo Domingo, Sept. 1.—Telegrams from Gov. Lambert tell of enthusiastic and brilliant receptions in honor of Gen. Jimenez at Santiago de los Caballeros and Moca. He is announced as a candidate for the presidency. Business is rapidly recovering from the depression caused by the uprising.

Yellow Fever at Key West.

Washington, Sept. 7.—A telegram from Surgeon Carter, of the marine hospital service, to the surgeon general states that to date there have been 21 cases of yellow fever and six deaths at Key West.

AS TO VOICES.

What the Musical Critic Said to the Girl Who Wanted to Sing to Him.

"Is this Mr. Kaile, the eminent musical critic and urban philosopher?"

A gentle, imploring creature spoke. The scene was a summer resort, not many miles from Boston. The hotel piazza was comparatively deserted.

A conservatively blonde, robust and impressive man made haste to reply: "I am Mr. Kaile," he said, in a fatherly manner, beaming through his glasses; "but I am not eminent, and sometimes, when I listen to the Boston Municipal Rain band, I doubt if I am musical. No man, my daughter, can be eminent, even though he be musical, if he is subject to good digestion."

Mr. Kaile beamed once more through his glasses in a fatherly manner. "Oh, I am so glad I have met you. Mother said she knew it was you, because she saw your picture in the Vanguard musical festival was held last winter. I want to ask you if it would be too much trouble for you to hear me sing this evening, and tell me honestly what you think of my voice."

One of the glasses through which Mr. Kaile had been beaming fell off the piazza railing, where Mr. Kaile had just placed it, with a crash. It would have been useless at that time, for there was no more beam in the eye of the good man, nor did he look then like a kind and indulgent father.

He gasped once or twice and replied: "My dear girl, it is true that my picture was printed in the Vanguard, one time, next to pure reading matter, and I hasten to assure you that I did not pay for it. It is also beyond dispute that I was present, as is my custom, when the musical festival was pulled off, but yet withal I lack that courage which enables less sympathetic men to refer to voice tests and give honest opinions."

He was warning to his subject and he did not wait for a reply.

"You are young," he continued, beaming once again, as a new glass was brought to replace the old. "You are young, you are fair. Undoubtedly some good or poetical teacher is trying to pay his rent by convincing you that before you is an operative future, and that perseverance is the keynote of the hour, as long as you pay for the hour. It is not for me, the chairman of our musical branch of the Confidence Operators' union, to interfere with a brother craftsman's means of livelihood. Being a woman, you have a voice and cultivation cannot hurt it. The same cultivation which helps you will help my fellow trades-unionists as well. You are young and hopeful. Somebody has already told you—I see it in your eyes—that even now you are as much beyond Nordica as Nordica is beyond Margaret Kline or a melancholy jigsaw. That may or may not be true. I shall not dispel your illusions. I will not decide."

The gentle, imploring creature looked perplexed and sorrowful.

"Can't you give me just one word of advice, Mr. Kaile?"

"With pleasure. Have you ever tested your sweet young voice on 'My Old New Hampshire Home'?"

"Why, no."

"Then don't."

And the critic who disclaimed eminence suddenly saw somebody in the distance who was not there, yelled cheerily: "In just a minute," in reply to a summons that had not been issued, saluted gracefully and departed with surprising celerity.

SUNDAY EVENING DIVERSIONS

Exercises Which Help the Children Through a Long Summer Day.

At the close of a long, stormy Sunday afternoon, when the children have been read to, and talked to, and instructed until minds are weary, and active bodies are longing for some physical exercise, I have put them through some simple, light gymnastics. I have let them lie on the floor with folded arms to see who could get up first without unfolding the arms. I let them strike all sorts of attitudes, and make "statues" of themselves. After such a performance we have a play called "Work," which is played by writing on slips of paper "Put books away," "Pick up papers," "Arrange the table," and so forth. Each child draws a slip and hastens to do as it directs, and in a very few minutes order is restored. After an evening hymn all gather close around mamma for a last little talk. Prayers are said, "Good nights" and kisses are exchanged, and eight o'clock finds every "chick and child" in bed. Whatever is done on Sunday the vital consideration is to develop the moral and spiritual nature, and to make Sunday in some degree a day of rest.

NATION'S GREETING TO DEWEY.

Features of the Reception to the Hero of Manila at the National Capital.

The central idea underlying the grand welcome to be given Admiral Dewey in Washington the first week in October is its national character. His arrival at the capital will mark his real home-coming to the American people, where the officials of the government will participate, and the magnificently jeweled sword voted by Congress will be presented. To that end all the arrangements will be of a simple but most dignified character. The welcome to the hero of Manila at the National Capital will be given by the people.

Sword Voted by Congress to Dewey.

It will probably occur on Monday, October 2, although the date will depend upon the length of the celebration in New York, which is still unsettled. The principal features of the reception in Washington, as planned by the citizens, with the cooperation of the President and Cabinet, will be two in number—the presentation of the sword voted by Congress, and a night parade. A public reception at the White House will be followed by dinner to the Admiral by President McKinley. The sword will be presented by Secretary Long, at the east front of the Capitol, in the presence of Mr. McKinley and all the members of the Cabinet, late in the afternoon, while the parade, consisting of organizations of all kinds, will be accompanied by an illumination of the city on a scale of beauty never before witnessed in Washington.

The different features of the preparations are in the hands of a central body of citizens and eleven committees, embracing in all over a thousand people. Preparations for the celebration have been in hand for over a month. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and other railroads entering Washington have agreed upon cheap rates for the celebration, and the committee expects that there will be an outpouring of patriotic citizens almost equal to the inauguration of a President.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

IPECAC IS SCARCE.

The Visible Supply of One of the Nervous Remedies for Children Now Limited.

Children, or most of them, will be pleased to learn that there is a scarcity of ipecac. This emetic is one of the sovereign remedies for children. The ipecac variety is well known to the drug trade of the United States, while the importation of the Carthagena variety is prohibited by the customs authorities of Brazil. But the increasing scarcity of the ipecac variety has directed attention to the Carthagena, or New Granada root, which, in appearance, does not materially differ from the Brazilian root, excepting that the rings which characterize ipecac are less conspicuous.

It is in its physiological effects that the Carthagena ipecac is supposed to differ from the Brazilian variety, the former containing less "emetic" than the latter, and owing its activity more to the active principle "emphaline," which is understood to have a different action from that of emetine. The prohibition of Carthagena ipecac is no doubt justifiable in view of the meager information regarding the physiological action of the drug as compared with ipecac, on which the efficacy of ipecac as a therapeutic agent is based. It is surprising that physiological research to determine the action of emphaline, the alkaloid which distinguishes the Carthagena variety, has not been undertaken earlier. In this respect the history of the two varieties of ipecacuanha is in contrast with that of many other remedial agents which have been the subject of pharmacological study.

Ipecacuanha is a low, creeping, perennial plant, growing wild in Brazil, having a faint, peculiar odor and a bitter, subacid, nauseous taste, the root of which is largely used as an emetic. This root is small and wrinkled, being marked by regular protuberances or rings. Since the collection of rubber in Brazil has assumed such proportions, those who formerly occupied themselves with gathering and preparing roots for market have abandoned the latter occupation for the former, which is more profitable and less laborious. The result has been to cut off greatly the supply of ipecacuanha in fact, practically none is gathered. The possibility of an early scarcity of the drug was foreseen by United States dealers, who have almost a monopoly of the market. Prices have been advancing steadily for ten years. In 1893 the price a pound was $1.25, but now it is $1.25. In view of the great increase in price the Brazilian gatherers might, for a time, find the gathering of ipecac a more profitable employment than the collection of rubber. N. Y. Press.

CURIOUS BUGS AS PETS.

Yucatan Insects Are Highly Esteemed by the People of That Country.

Three of the most curious pets that were ever fed were brought to Mexico City the other day. They were brought there by the butler in the household of President Diaz, who has been on a trip to Yucatan. They are three bugs of a rare breed. The only place in the world in which they are found is Yucatan. The average specimen is about an inch and a half long. Its body is in two sections, resembling the bodies of some species of the beetle, and each section is covered with a stout shield or plate which is almost flat, curving but a little at the edges. When the head of the bug is placed under the microscope it looks rather intelligent and a little bold.

The bugs which were brought here are in a highly ornate state. Some cunning artist of Yucatan has painted which in the Mexican national colors on the rear plates over their bodies and highly colored bands of flowers on the front plates and has gilded their long, double-jointed legs. Little gold chains are attached to the middle of the rear plate, which is the larger of each bug's body, by which his legship can be lifted up or held around.

One of the bugs was presented to President Diaz, one to a Mexican lady and the other to an American lady. They are pets in the literal sense of the word. The American lady's bug is receiving all kinds of solicitous attention and seems to like it. An effort will be made to teach him some tricks.

His habits and manners are being closely watched. He loves the sun, having been raised in the hot country, and when he is lifted by his gold chain and dropped in the full glare of the sun, with the cork of a beer bottle in front of him to munch, he seems to be supremely happy. Mexican Herald.

A Bird Without a Conscience.

"I really think that an ostrich has more brains than an Arab," they have the most curious agents and eyes—colorless, cold, yet intelligent as a but they are the eyes of a bird with no conscience. An ostrich lacks as if he would really enjoy slaying as if he could commit crime after crime, from pure love of it and never know remorse; yet there is a fascination in the old birds, and they have their good points. The father is domestic in spite of looking as if he belonged to all the clubs, and much to my delight, I saw one sitting on the eggs while the mother walked out and took the air. Ostriches and Arabs do women's work with an admirable division of labor. Ostriches have an irresistible way of waving their lovely plump wings and one old fellow 20 years old actually imitates the ostriches. The keeper says to him: "Pence," and although he is about ten feet tall, he sits down with his scaly legs spread out on each side of him and shutting his eyes, he throws his long, ugly neck and neck from side to side, making a curious grunting noise, and waving his wings in blowy knots like a skirt dancer.—Woman's Home Companion.

ONEIDA COUNTY FAIR.
The Fourth Annual Fair a Big Success.
ENTRIES NUMBER 845

Exhibits in all Departments
Good. Attendance Large.
Sports and Races
Interesting.

The Fourth Annual Fair of Oneida county was in almost every way more of a success than had been anticipated. Monday morning dawned clear and bright, and the weather throughout the fair days was all that could be desired. The officers and their assistants were on hand early Monday, but not too early to accommodate the numerous exhibitors who were there waiting to have space assigned them. The day was a busy one for everyone connected with the management. E. B. Crofoot and Mrs. Beers, who attended to entering the articles on the books, had no time to spare, but were kept busy until late in the evening. When the books were closed, the articles entered numbered 845, nearly 200 more than had been listed at any of the previous exhibitions. The gates were open during the day, but there were no ticket sellers nor gate keepers on duty, and the fair was not formally opened until Tuesday morning. The attendance the three days was large, and the citizens of Rhinelander and the surrounding country are entitled to much credit for their very liberal patronage. The merchants of the city assisted materially in making the attendance what it was, and are especially deserving of praise for the public spirit shown in closing their places of business each afternoon. The display in the building was the best that it has ever been. The showing of vegetables was such as would prove to the most skeptical that Oneida county can't be beat in this line in the state. Many farmers had splendid exhibits both in quality and number of articles shown. They were all so good that it was difficult for the judges to decide between them. One exhibit here which is deserving of special mention was the sample of flax shown by Joe Eternicka. It was grown on his farm in the southern part of the Town of Pelican, and those who are in a position to judge say the samples, which were from the crops of '95, '96, '97, '98 and '99, were as good as could be produced anywhere. Mr. Eternicka has had a great deal of experience both in growing and handling flax, and he says this country is the best in the world for producing the article. Another article was the yellow dent corn, fully matured, which was exhibited by Mr. F. S. Robbins. It was raised on his Pine Lake farm. It goes to show the possibilities of Oneida county as an agricultural district. The ladies rather outdid themselves this year, for the display in the art and fancy work department excelled all former displays. The stock department made a fine showing, the number of entries here being large. Nearly all the pens and stalls were filled, and all the stock exhibited was up in splendid condition. Thursday afternoon the stock was exhibited on the track in front of the grand stand. It was headed by W. L. Beers' stallion Calithorne, and his colts from 2 years old up to 5, including Chessathorne, who won the 300 trot and pace. F. S. Robbins' string of draft horses followed, and right here we might say that these horses can't be beat in the state. Following the horses, came the herd of young Jerseys owned by Barney Moran and the Red Pole and Holstein stock of E. B. Crofoot's. This is the first time the stock has been shown on the track, and it elicited much favorable comment from the large audience. They were all beautiful specimens of their kind. Many breeds were represented in the poultry department, and a very creditable showing made, though not as large as it was last year. Tuesday afternoon at 120 the game of foot ball between the Rhinelander and Ironwood High School teams was called, and was watched with great interest by the lovers of this sport. Our boys were outclassed, owing to lack of practice and training, the Ironwoods having a remarkably heavy team for a High School aggregation, and all were well up in points of the game. The score stood 10 to 0 in favor of Ironwood. The visitors were a gentlemanly, well behaved lot of young men. They were accompanied by Prof. Haller, trainer, E. B. Williams, member of school board, B. W. Shove, C. & N.

W. Agent, and Luther C. Brewer, all of Ironwood. The bicycle races filled in the remainder of the afternoon. The summary for these races is as follows:

BRACE RACES
One mile novices—W. H. Davis, 1; Bert Steelman 2; W. Martell 3. Time 2:50.
Half mile open—Geo. C. Deles, Milwaukee, 1; Claud Shepard, Rhinelander, 2; J. W. Playman, New London, tied for 3rd; Gottlieb Heib, Merrill, 4; E. C. Lang, Antigo, 5. Time 1:15.
Half mile, boys under 16—Guy Ogden, 1; Stewart Smith, 2; Dave Martell 3; Geo. Lambert 4. Time 1:25.
One mile open—Claud Shepard, 1; Geo. Deles, 2; J. Playman, 3; G. Heib, 4. Time 2:50.
Quarter mile open—J. Playman, 1; Geo. Deles, 2; Claud Shepard and Heib tied for 3rd place. Time 35.
Two mile handicap—Geo. Deles, 1; G. Heib, 2; J. Playman, 3; W. H. Davis, 4. Time 5:05.
Mr. Percy Champagne, of Merrill, acted as referee, and Allan James, of this city as starter.
The races Wednesday and Thursday afternoon were as good as ever seen on the track. The strong wind of Tuesday and Wednesday made the time slower than it would otherwise have been, both in the bicycle and horse races. They were none the less interesting however. Thursday was warm and still, and better time was made. Owing to the lateness of the hour, we can only give the result of these races.

Following is the result of Wednesday's races:
220 Trot and Pace.
Frank Alright, g. g. Pitcher, 1 1
Little John, b. g. Forbes, 2 2
Little Judy, b. m. Kirk, 3 3

NOTES OF THE FAIR
E. S. Shepard's booth attracted the attention of all. His Indian and other relics, pencil drawings, birch bark work, canoes, etc., made an interesting collection.
W. L. Beers & Co. and Lewis Hardware Co. each had tastefully arranged booths, displaying their respective lines of goods.
The music furnished by Prof. Field's band was an appreciated feature of each day's program. The boys presented a nice appearance and their efforts brought forth good results.

Allie Wooster, owner of the running horse F. H. McNutt, received a telegram stating that his father had been run over by a horse at Westfield and seriously injured.
All praise is due J. C. Curran, president of the Agricultural Association, for the successful way in which the fair was conducted this year. The management was left entirely in his hands, and the smooth and pleasant way in which everything connected with it passed off, proves conclusively that no better general could have been selected.

A greatly appreciated feature of the entertainment on the track each afternoon was the exhibition of trick bicycle riding by Snapper Garrison, a member of the "Pay Train" company, which gave a performance in our city each evening during the fair. His antics on the wheel called forth loud applause.

Mrs. T. B. McIndoe, with her driving horse "Pessie," carried off the first prize in the exhibition of single drivers, and Mrs. Sam Cole second.
Dr. McIndoe was awarded first premium for gentlemen's driving team, and Sheriff Wisner second.

Robert Kurtz, formerly cashier at the N. W. depot in this place, now proprietor of a large glove and mitten factory at Merrill, had a fine display of his goods on exhibition.
To F. S. Robbins more than to any one man, is due the fact that Oneida county boasts of a full second to none in the state. Each year he has taken great interest and done much for it, and at the meeting just closed made splendid exhibits in several departments at a great inconvenience to himself. The officers and members of the Association feel deeply grateful to Mr. Robbins for the favors conferred.

Arthur Darling, who has filled the position of bookkeeper for the Brown-Robbins Lumber Co. for several months, leaves Saturday for Chicago, where he has accepted a similar position with the wholesale lumber firm of W. E. Kelley & Co.

Shepard's White Minstrels.
Shepard's Great Minstrel Jubilee, which will appear at the Grand Opera House on Wednesday, Sept.
21, are offering a number of novelties in black face art this season, that are quite out of the ordinary.
The "Crimson First Part" is one of the most beautiful products of scenic skill ever placed on any stage.
The entire setting is in brilliant red with gold trimmings, and requires nearly an entire baggage car to transport.

Leut. Walter Allen, one of the greatest living ventriloquists, and Ogawa's Troupe of Royal Japanese, are some of the leading features of the show.

A magnificent street parade will be given at noon, and a grand free open air concert by the entire band of solo musicians is promised in the evening.

Aunt Jerusha, the Favorite Comedy.
The amusement loving citizens of Rhinelander will have an opportunity this season to witness the latest comedy success, the greatest of all New England plays, Aunt Jerusha, which will be produced at the opera house Monday, Sept. 19.
It is a simple story well told, that treats of life on a New England farm, introducing quaint old Aunt Jerusha,
the village spinster, whose ambition is the success of her wonderful "Sure Cure" her remedy for all known diseases. The story of her trials and ultimate triumph, interspersed with comedy and pathos, forms one of the most interesting plays now before the public. You will enjoy the antics of the famous Rube Quartette. In short the entire evening's performance is one succession of hearty laughs and rare enjoyment.

A Bad Smash Up.

The big saw mill of the Brown Bro. Lumber Co. was the scene of an accident Friday night which, while not resulting in the death of anyone, tore up things to such an extent that the mill was shut down for several days. The steam "nigger" on the hand side caused the trouble.
It popped through the floor without the knowledge of Sawyer Joe Keller and before he could move had thrown a big log crosswise of the carriage and on through the saw, the end on side of the sawyer, twisting down the controlling levers as if they were straws and knocking Keller half way across the mill. The carriage being released from restraint swept down the slide and was turned into kindling wood. The riders jumped at the first sweep of the big log and found refuge in the filing room and thus escaped injury. Steam was finally shut off from the supply pipes and an appraisal of damage made. Mr.
Keller's injuries were found not to be serious and he was soon on his feet again. The hand saw tore around through all the wreckage and was not injured and that it escaped was considered wonderful by the men.
The mill started up again Wednesday,
repairs having been completed.

Woodboro Items.
Charles Steel went to Rhinelander
Monday on business.

Geo. Marshall drove over to Rhinelander Tuesday and took in the fair.

Miss Lizzie Bogle left Monday for Muskegon, Mich., for a brief visit with friends.

Martin Bogle, the genial mill foreman, did business with the Rhinelander Iron Co. last Friday.

Louie Beanie, boiler inspector for the Hartford Insurance Co., was here on business Wednesday.

The saw mill of the Geo. E. Wood Lumber Co. was obliged to shut down last Thursday on account of the big steam piston blowing out.

Star Lake Notes.

School opened Monday with a good attendance.

day after a visit of three weeks with Rhinelander friends.

STAR LAKE BROWNIE.

A Farm or a Factory.

When you buy a farm or build a factory, it is natural to consider all conditions and to locate to the very best advantage. In the northern portion of Wisconsin there lies a vast stretch of undeveloped, or partially developed country, which is awaiting the settler and manufacturer to turn it into productiveness and wealth.
Thousands of acres of rich lands covered with fine hardwood timber are open to the settler who can obtain as much as he desires at very reasonable figures and upon easy terms. Improvements, such as school houses and roads are being pushed and ten years of progress will make astonishing change.

The earth's rich deposits of iron ore, clay, kaolin and marl, together with hardwood timber, easily supply the wants of the manufacturer and offer a fine inducement for the location of a plant or factory.

THE WISCONSIN RAILWAY CO.
running through this rich timber and mineral belt has opened it to the world by offering quick and cheap transport to the principal markets of the country.

Anent the Coming Foot Ball Game.

The following letter was received by Manager Parker of the foot ball team from Manager Cole, of the West Superior eleven:

Yours of the 12th. at hand,
the terms stated in same are entirely satisfactory to us and we will be on hand Saturday Sept. 25th, with a good foot ball team. We will play you a return game here Oct. 21st, guaranteeing you railroad and hotel expenses for your team of 15 men;
this was decided at our meeting last night. I would not allow the fellows to accept your offer to play us at Rhinelander Sept. 21, until they had all promised to do so, and you can rest assured that we will keep our word. We play two games with Duluth before Oct. 21 and figure that we can clear a fair sum to help us along, and this with a subscription list from our business men, I think, will put us clear on the expense of your trip. At any rate we will play you here Oct. 21st. If we have to stand the expense personally.

Will enclose our line up for publication. You will see that we have made some changes over last year and I think we will give you a "warmer" game than last fall. Hoping to meet you personally Sept. 21, I am,
Yours very sincerely,
Don E. Cole.

The Best Cough Medicine. Every Bottle

Knowing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to be a medicine of great worth and merit and especially valuable for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough, we will herewith warrant every bottle bought of us and will refund the money to anyone who is not satisfied after using two bottles of a 25 or 50 cent bottle. For sale at Anderle & Hinman's.

For Sale.

The Cook residence in the Sixth Ward is offered for sale. The house has twelve rooms, besides pantry, closets and woodshed. It is in good repair, having just been painted inside and out, and the walls newly papered. For information as to price

Episcopal Church.

Servants at St. Augustine's Mission church are as follows: Holy Communion every Sunday at 8:00 a. m.
Morning prayer and sermon at 10:30.
Sunday School at noon; evening prayer and sermon at 7:30 p. m.

On the first Sunday of the month
there will be no early Communion, but a late celebration of the Eucharistic service instead at 10:30 a. m.

Every one gladly welcomed to all services.
C. M. HIRSHOCK, Pastor.

A Word to Mothers.

Mothers of children afflicted with croup or a severe cold need not hesitate to administer Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It contains no opiate nor narcotic in any form and may be given as confidently to the babe as to an adult. The great success that has attended its use in the treatment of colds and croup has won for it the approval and praise it has received throughout the United States and in many foreign lands. For sale by Anderle & Hinman.

A WONDERFUL CURE.

A Prominent Virginia Editor Had Almost Given Up, but was Brought Back to Perfect Health by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.
Read His Editorial.

From the Times, Hillsdale, Va.

I suffered with diarrhoea for a long time and thought I was past being cured. I had spent much time and money and suffered so much misery that I had almost decided to give up all hopes of recovery and await the result, but not the ad. of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and also some testimonials stating how some wonderful cures had been wrought by this remedy, I decided to try it. After taking a few doses I was entirely well of that trouble, and I wish to say further to my readers and fellow sufferers that I am a hale and hearty man today and feel as well as I ever did in my life.—O. R. MOORE, Sold by Anderle & Hinman.

THE STORY TELLER

Stephana's Travels in Trousers

By W. J. Henderson.

STEPHANA sat on the great stone under the old willow and gazed into the brook. Her eyes were big and round and had a far-away look, for Stephana was thinking very hard about the book she had been reading. It was a book of great deeds by great men, and Stephana wished to do such deeds, but could not see her way to them because she was a girl. The ripples in the brook danced and sang in the twinkling sunlight that slipped between the leaves of the old willow, and many little fishes, with soft, gray backs and bright silver sides, flashed in and out among the long grasses that grew on the bottom. But Stephana's eyes were full of the smoke of battles and spray of stormy oceans, and so she did not see them.

"I just wish I was a boy!" she said aloud.

"And why, I should like to know?"

The far-away look went out of Stephana's eyes, and she started up, dropping the book, at the sound of a strange voice. She saw a little old woman in a black gown and a red tippet standing near her.

"Why do you wish to be a boy?" asked the old woman.

"Because I should like to be a great man and do great deeds, and be valued by the world," answered Stephana. "Just I am only a girl."

The old woman gazed earnestly at the girl and shook her head. Then she walked away a short distance, plucked some leaves and came back.

"Have you ever eaten any of these leaves?" she asked.

"No," said Stephana.

"Try them; they are very refreshing," Stephana hardly knew what to think of this curious old woman, who seemed to have dropped out of the sky, but she felt impelled to take the leaves, and eat some of them. Straightway she grew exceedingly drowsy, and lying down beside the tree, went fast asleep. When she awoke she was lost in amazement, for she saw that her feet had grown large and were shod with heavy, hob-nailed boots; that her limbs had lost their graceful roundness and become long and muscular, and were encased in trousers; that her arms were thin and wiry, her shoulders sinewy and her chest broad and flat, and that her whole body was covered with a blue shirt; that her hands had become large, rough and bony; that her hair had turned short and stubby; in fine—that she was a boy! Beside her lay a boy's cap, a little bundle of clothing and a stout staff.

"I must set out upon my travels," she said to herself. "I must go in search of my great deeds, so that the world may value me."

So, setting the cap on her head and shouldering the staff and bundle, Stephana set forth with an eager heart. She walked a long distance before noon, and then she paused at the farm house to get a glass of milk and a piece of bread. The farmer's boy slipped her shoulder so that it stung and said:

"Well, my young buck, where do you tramp?"

"I go in search of great deeds," she answered.

"Well, if you'll stop here," said the boy, "and ride our bay stallion that has killed three men, I'll warrant it's a greater deed than ever you did before."

But Stephana shook her head, thanked the farmer's wife and pressed on. When she had gone a mile she saw a man sitting by the roadside, under a tree, writing. As she came up to him he paused in his work and smiled so kindly that she was emboldened to ask him what he wrote.

"I am writing a poem," he said.

"Are you a poet?" she asked.

"Men have said so."

"What is your poem about?"

"It is about woman's love."

"I don't think that a fine subject," said Stephana, about to depart.

"My dear lad," said the poet, with sweet solemnity, "it is the finest of all subjects. Believe me when I tell you, though perchance you are yet too young to understand me, that without the love of woman—mother, sister or wife—life would be a miserable doom, and no man would do a great or generous deed. Will it please you to hear my poem?"

"No, it will not," answered Stephana. "I would rather hear a soldier tell of his great triumphs, or a sailor of his victories over the angry sea."

That night the boy slept in a barn and set forth again at sunrise. After walking some miles Stephana saw a magnificent man standing in the midst of a beautiful park. At the lodge gate stood the porter.

"Is the master of the place very rich?" she asked.

"He has millions of money, and he made it all by his own genius," said the porter.

"I must see this man," thought Stephana, and then she said to the porter: "Do you think I might go to the mansion and ask for bread and milk?"

"Surely," answered the porter, "for the master is very good."

"Rich, great and good!" reflected Stephana, as she walked up the beautiful path leading to the house. "How happy he must be, and how the world must admire him!"

Presently she saw a man sitting in a large chair in the shade of a fine tree, which grew before the house. His hands hung idly by his sides, and his head was bowed. His whole attitude betrayed depression, and when she phana had drawn near to him she perceived that there was a deep sadness upon his countenance. So she said to him:

"Sir, I am told that you are rich and good. Why are you sad?"

The man raised his head and gazed intently at Stephana.

"My boy," he said, kindly, "have you a sister?"

"No," said Stephana, with a little start; "but I have a brother."

"That is very well," said the owner of the mansion, "but a sister is better for a boy. I had a sister, but she is gone now. I am, indeed, rich in this world's goods; but if I could give them all away and have my sister back, I should be infinitely richer. You are very young, and you are just setting out upon life's journey; therefore, listen! Many years ago my parents died, leaving me a great fortune and my little sister. I was not able to withstand the temptations thrown in my way by the possession of so much wealth. I spent my idle days in riotous living, surrounded by dissolute companions, who sought me only because I could purchase folly for their amusement. Every night when I went home I paused to look at my sleeping sister. No matter how late the hour, she always awoke and said to me: 'Brother, I prayed for you to-night.' In a few years she grew to be a young woman, and I found that the fortune which had been left me was reduced to a few thousands. But my sister set herself to work to change my manner of life. By her unflinching sweetness and devotion she gradually won me away from my idleness and dissipation. Then she induced me to embark in commercial enterprise with my few remaining thousands, while she devoted herself to the beautiful task of making my home a paradise for me. My ventures prospered and I grew rich and was tempted again. But my sister led me to spend my money and my leisure in doing good deeds, and so she won for me what I never had before, the love and respect of good men and women. All my life she surrounded me with the glory of her love. She gave up the world for me and saved me from myself. She was a noble woman. And now she is gone. Do you wonder that I am sad?"

Stephana was much touched by the story of the devoted sister, and went upon her way, thinking that any girl who had the opportunity to lead so beautiful a life need not be so greatly discontented with her lot. Nevertheless, Stephana reflected that, as she had no such opportunity, she would prefer to remain a boy. In an hour she was quite as eager as ever to find great deeds to do. So she walked briskly along the road until presently she heard the sound of surf beating upon rocks, and, turning a sharp bend, she came upon a wide prospect of the sea. Ragged cliffs stretched away before her, save where an opening led to a pretty little bay, in which the waves sang gently upon a beach of silvery sand. Beyond the beach stood a handsome house, while just outside the bay rode at anchor a splendid steel battleship. Beside a little pier in front of the house lay a large, which had evidently brought ashore some officer of high rank. Stephana descended to the beach and walked to the pier.

"Whose house is this?" she asked a sailor.

"That is the home of our great admiral," was the reply, "and we have brought him ashore to see his wife, who is dying."

"Has he done great deeds?" asked Stephana.

"The greatest on the sea," answered the sailor. "If you live to do but our such deed, my boy, you will have the world at your feet."

Stephana, full of desire to meet such a man and hear of his deeds, walked towards the house. In a little grove beside it she saw a man walking up and down in great agitation. She judged by his uniform that he was an officer.

"Sir," she said, "I wish to hear about the admiral's great deeds."

"My boy," said the man, "I am the admiral. I do not know what great deeds I have done, for to-day my life is empty. My wife is dying."

"But," said Stephana, "those we love must die, but noble deeds live forever."

"Boy," said the admiral, sadly, "you speak like a child. When you are a man with gray hair you will know that riches, fame, wealth and rank are empty and worthless; and that the only thing worth living for is the love of a good wife. It is better for a man to be a poor laborer and to have his wife by his side, than to be a king and be alone. I was a poor lieutenant when I married her, and I had no ambition, no energy, no courage. But she used to sit by my side in the evenings and read to me from the histories of heroes and the achievements of good officers. Finally I said: 'I wish I could be like those men.' 'So you shall,' she said. 'But I am only a poor lieutenant,' said I, 'and they were all commanders, or captains, or admirals.' 'But they were all lieutenants first,' she said. And then one by one she read to me the books that told the story of their lives and aroused within me the desire to study and prepare myself for posts of command. Then there came a war, and my wife said to me: 'Go and win your fame. I will keep the home sweet till you return.' I went, and when I was amid the smoke and flame of battle, I realized that I had left the greater hero at home to fight a silent battle against her anxiety and dread. At last I was wounded and sent to a naval hospital. My courage was gone, and I was quite ready to give up the struggle and die. But she came to me, and though she was overwhelmed with grief, she thought only of my honor, and she sustained me through all that trial and brought me out of it, praise God, a better man. Boy, I tell you now, from the experience of 20 years, that men are weak, impatient, cross, unheroic, and that nearly every one of them owes his so-called greatness to the far higher nobility of some dear woman, whose bravery and faith have made him all that he is."

Stephana turned away and walked thoughtfully down toward the beach. When she reached it the waves were still singing on the sand, the large lay at the landing place, and the great battleship's brasswork glittered like polished gold in the sunlight. But Stephana thought only of the noble woman whose face she had never seen, but whose life had glorified her home and her husband and laid up for her treasures in heaven.

"Somehow," she reflected, "these men all seem to think they owe a great deal to us women. Oh, I forgot! I'm a boy now."

She smiled as she climbed up the cliff again and set out along the highway once more. In good time she came to another fine mansion, and saw the porter sitting at the gates.

"And who lives in this fine place?" she asked.

"The famous Gen. Power," answered the porter, as if proud to serve so notable a master.

Stephana entered the gate and passed up the handsome drive that led toward the house. On the terrace she saw a noble-looking man, who, she had no doubt, was the general. So she went up and saluted him with much respect, so that he smiled and asked her to enter the house.

"What do you seek?" he asked.

"Knowledge of your great deeds," she said.

"Oh," said he, "I never did any. My men did them all. But I will show you my house."

So saying, he led Stephana into a great hall, where there were many chairs and a large table, and fine pictures upon the walls.

"This is the banquet hall," he said.

"And yonder beautiful chair with the silver cushions is your chair?" she said.

"No," he answered briefly, "that is my mother's chair. I sit on this."

And he pointed to a plain wooden seat. Next he led her into a magnificent drawing room, where refined taste contributed wholly to comfort.

"This is my mother's parlor," he said, briefly.

They passed now into a beautiful apartment of glass, filled with the rarest plants and most exquisite flowers.

"This is my mother's conservatory," he said.

The general mounted a marble stairway, followed by the wondering Stephana, and threw open the door of a room which was the embodiment of comfort and peace.

"This is my mother's sitting room," said the general.

"But," said Stephana, timidly, "I should like to see your own rooms."

The general led her up another flight of stairs and showed her a severely plain little room, in which an iron bedstead and many books were the chief objects that met the eye.

"That is my room," said the general, briefly, turning away and leading Stephana down the stairs again. At their foot he paused and said:

"I shall now take you to my mother's boudoir, where you will see her."

"Mother," said the general, "here is a boy, who has set out on his travels, and who has come to learn about my great deeds. I have shown him my best."

Stephana looked up in wonder and said:

"You have shown me only a splendid home, which you seem to have made all for your mother."

"And that is the best deed I ever did," replied the general, warmly. "For I can never do enough for the mother who gave up all her young life to teaching me how to be a man."

"But," said the wonderful old lady in a sweet voice, "a good son is a mother's glory."

"But a good mother is a son's life," said the general. And, after a moment's pause, he added:

"My boy, women are the mothers of men, and, therefore, they are greater, nobler and more beautiful than men, who owe to them all that they are. In all ages men have sung the praises of women, and in the world to come they will hymn the honor of their mothers before the throne of Him who doeth all things well."

The general's voice became round and solemn as he spoke the last words, and Stephana passed out of the room, leaving him kneeling beside his mother as he must have done in boyhood. Stephana soon found herself once more on the highway, and now she discovered that she was indeed very weary, for she had walked many miles. So she lay down under an oak, and in a few minutes went fast asleep. And she dreamed that she saw the little old woman in the black gown and the red tippet, and the boy with the cap, and the poet, and the admiral, and the general, and the porter, and they were all commanders, or captains, or admirals. "But they were all lieutenants first," she said. ## THE UNLUCKY TURTLE

It is Success in Leading Human Hunters It is Run Down by Dogs or Tigers.

"While preparing our evening meal," says Prince Maximilian, of Newwied, in his "Tour in Brazil," "and collecting dry wood on the beach, we found a colossal turtle on the point of laying its eggs. Nothing could have been more grateful to the hungry company. Our presence did not disturb the turtle. Four men lifted it up from the ground, but it evinced no other sign of restlessness than puffing and blowing; and the moment it was put down again it began throwing up earth with its fin-like hind feet. One of our soldiers laid himself on the ground beside the turtle, put his hand in the hole which it had excavated, and threw out the eggs as fast as the animal laid them. About a hundred were collected in this way in ten minutes. This turtle usually lays from ten to twelve dozen eggs. Turtles often crawl up from the sea and travel a distance of from 50 to 100 feet on the shore to deposit their eggs. Junglulu found hundreds of turtle skeletons on the coast of Java, many of them five feet long and three feet broad. Some of them were bleached, but others were still fresh and bleeding. In the air multitudes of birds of prey were circling. "This is the spot where the poor turtles are attacked by the wild dogs. These savage animals, in packs of 20 or more, attack every available spot of their luckless victims; they bite their heads, paws and tail, and manage to turn it over. They then tear up the stomach shell and feast on the flesh and eggs. "Sometimes the turtle escapes and reaches the sea, dragging the tugging dogs after it. Sometimes, too, the tiger regales himself on the turtle. Junglulu's Javanese drove off a tiger which was worrying a turtle, and saved the still living prey, which six men could scarcely carry."

ODD WATCH FACE

It Shows a Man's Career from a Babe in Arms to Manhood and the End of Life.

A wonderful piece of mechanism, consisting of a watch dial of unique construction, has been finished and put on exhibition by one of the deft-fingered artists belonging to one of the large watch factories at Waltham.

ALLEGORICAL WATCH DIAL.

Sizes. It contains, instead of the usual numerals, twelve small but distinct silhouettes figures, beginning with a woman with a very small child in her arms. At one o'clock the little mother and her miniature baby are clearly depicted, the infant lying in "long clothes." At two o'clock the same figure appears, but the child has perceptibly grown. At three o'clock the little mother is still the same, but the baby is in "short clothes." At four o'clock the child again appears, and so on up to eight o'clock, when he goes to school for the first time. At nine o'clock he is seen in college gown, standing beside the now elderly mother. At ten o'clock the deceased is brought to view, the young man taking leave of his loved parent. At 11 o'clock he is aged with the snows of many winters. At 12 o'clock he makes his final appearance, an old and decrepit specimen of humanity, praying for his end. During the next 12 hours the same scenes are again enacted. The little machine is a wonder all round.

Long and literary.

BOY WITH A FUTURE

He Undertook a Job at House-Moving Which Professionals Had Refused to Perform.

Commodore George W. Morton's famous Red Lion cottage at Hough's Neck, Mass., has for some time been considered a historic landmark by the inhabitants of that vicinity. They have regarded it with reverential awe, but a recent windstorm treated it with contempt.

The cottage was so badly damaged as to be rendered almost uninhabitable, and its severe lattering woe to the heart of many a loyal Quin-cyite.

Mr. Morton took a gloomy view of the remains after the storm, and concluded that he would not attempt to rebuild if he had to occupy the same location.

HOUSE MOVED BY A BOY.

He wanted to move the cottage higher up the hill, at the foot of which it had stood.

A number of skillful building movers were called into consultation, but after looking over the ground they shook their heads and pronounced the job impracticable. Mr. Morton had almost given up his idea when Charlie Cavanaugh, a boy scarcely out of his teens, offered to perform the feat.

The owner of the cottage was rather skeptical, and frankly said so, but the boy was allowed to go ahead and show what he could do.

The job was a pretty difficult one. The building had to be jacked 34 feet up to the level of the top of the hill, and then slid across to terra firma. What old hands in the business had pronounced impossible this boy did without a blunder. No wonder Mr. Morton has been lavish in his praise of the boy's feat.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

CURIOUS ATTACHMENT.

How a Little Brown Dog Showed a Pig, Which Was His Friend, the Way Home.

There are few things more interesting in the natural history of animals, or, indeed, more wonderful, than the partiality which individuals of totally different race have exhibited for each other. About ten years ago a friend who was a rector of a rural parish in North Wales bought a pig at one of his village fairs. It belonged to a cottager who lived nearly four miles from the place where the fair was held, and who had probably brought it on foot from his cottage that morning.

The pig was driven up to the rectory and placed in the sty, and on the next morning my friend went to see his new purchase and to turn him out into the fold to take an airing, where he was left to pick a few peas that had been thrown down to make his pastime more agreeable.

After awhile the pig was not to be found and a servant was sent to see if he had strayed back to his old home.

There he was found happy and free among the other animals of the cottage. He was again driven to his new quarters, and confined to the sty for nearly two days. When it was thought he had become reconciled to his new home or had forgotten his old one he was again liberated and suffered to roam at will about the fold.

He was watched for awhile, but seemed to be so entirely at home that he was left and forgotten until it was time to confine him to his own quarters, when he was again sought for in vain.

He had once more strayed to his old haunts, and had to be brought back again.

On the morning following this escape my friend went to the sty and found near it a little brown dog, which he then remembered he had seen about the premises several times since the fair, and it occurred to him that the pig and he were acquainted and would, if the opportunity were offered, trot home together.

So the pig was liberated in order to see if the surmise was correct, and sure enough, recognition, sweet and tender, was soon witnessed.

They were followed at a respectable distance for fully half a mile, as they diligently trotted home together, the dog leading the way, and anxiously looking back every now and then to see if his friend was following.

The little dog had been missed by his master for long periods together, and his absence could not be accounted for till my friend solved the mystery. There was evidently a strong attachment between them, but whether it was the force of this attachment or anxiety to look after his master's interests, the conduct of the dog was equally wonderful.—London Mail.

CANNIBAL IN THE INK.

He Was from the South Sea Islands and There Was Character in His Writing.

Rather an amusing incident was connected with the return to San Francisco, en route to Washington, of Justice W. L. Chambers, who has been for a number of years chief justice of Samoa. The justice is well educated and a highly cultivated Alabamian, with that polish of that rare axis, the Southern gentleman of the best type. In an interview, published at Honolulu on his way up, the chief justice was seriously misrepresented in his alleged statements regarding Samoan matters that he took the time to prevent in San Francisco of writing out his views on the more intricate matters concerning which he was interviewed. Like most gentlemen, Judge Chambers' penmanship would never be taken as a model in a district school. A printer on a morning paper to whom it was given to set up was in despair.

"Look here," he said, "this is positively the worst writing I ever was up against!"

"But that was written by the chief justice of Samoa, man. Look how much character there is in the writing!"

"Chief justice of Samoa!" roared the compositor. "That accounts for it. There is character in his hand. I might have known he was a South Sea Islander. I could smell cannibal in the ink!"—San Francisco News Letter.

We had not mentioned to mother the subject of Percy's trip to London. She had naturally concluded that he had business of his own to attend to, and was pleased and grateful when he promised her, at parting, that he would not be absent long and would return to help me in my discouraging task of finding father so soon as ever he could get away. We met Percy on the afternoon of the third day, and as Percy and I tramped the platform of the Warsaw station, awaiting the arrival of his train, I, for one, was in such a state of excitement and expectation that I had not a word to say to my companion by reason of the quaking of my jaws and the rapid beating of my heart, and I fancy Percy, though he had so much less at stake on the result of Percy's trip, was not much less agitated than I to hear what he should have to tell us.

Slowly and laboriously the train dragged itself into the station, as Russian trains do. There is a note of that fine rushing in at full speed and pulling up short at the very platform in the admirable manner of our English engine drivers. The poor old Russian engine, a lumbering, wood burning thing, has had an immense distance to go, to reach, and is no doubt so tired that it can scarcely drag itself and its heavy load of carriages into the haven where it would be. However, Percy's train crawled slowly and mournfully in at last, and out jumped Percy.

I could see at once by his radiant face and the pleased smile with which he greeted us that the dear old fellow had been successful, or believed himself to have succeeded, in his enterprise. I sprang to him and seized his hand.

"Well, old man," I murmured, scarcely able for excitement to articulate the words, "what luck?"

"The very best, as I sincerely believe!" said Percy, pressing my hand very hard. "I found the man, as I telegraphed, and I know where he lives and—"

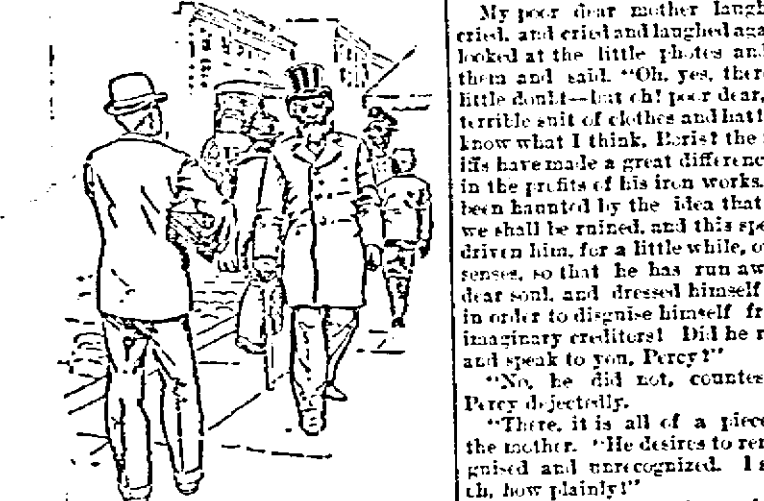

"Oh, is it father?" I blurted, a sort of black mist seeming to form before my eyes for very intensity of excitement.

"Dear old Boris, I firmly believe it is," said Percy. "I cannot say for certain, but there could hardly be another so like him that I could be mistaken about. He has not a brother, has he?"

"Oh, no!" I murmured. "I think it must be he. But why, why? I did not finish my sentence. I believe I burst into tears and was hurried into the carriage by Percy and Boris. There were not very many people about, the train having been nearly empty. I hope there were few witnesses to my weakness.

Boris took up the conversation in the carriage. "So you think it is really the count?" he began. "Tell me, did you get a snapshot?"

"I got three," said Percy with pride. "and was not caught at it. Twice, I

"This is a hand camera," I said, "and I've just taken a snapshot." I knew, he did not even see or notice me. The third time he looked straight at me and suspected me. I suppose, for he asked what I was doing.

"This is a hand camera," I said, "and I've just taken a snapshot of Marybeth's church, with your kind permission." He only glanced and passed on. Percy puffed and laughed.

"How did he talk English?" I asked.

"Father brokenly—but that was all he said, so that I cannot judge very well."

"My father speaks perfectly, as you know," I said.

"It is nothing!" exclaimed Boris. "He would assume a foreign accent, supposing that he does not wish to be recognized as the count. Are the portraits successful?"

"The photos are not developed yet," replied Percy. "We'll do them together after dinner, or before, if there's time." The developing of these three plates was an exciting operation. The printing from the negatives next morning was even more so. The prints represented a man whose dress and general appearance were precisely as I had seen in my dear father's looking glass, but the face—so far as I could judge of it from a portrait, and that a very small and not particularly printed one—was my father's face. There was little or no doubt of it.

"Well!" said Boris, when I had made a prolonged and silent inspection of each of the three photos. "In a word, is it the count or is it not?"

"Heaven only knows," I murmured.

"I shall do so if I can," said Boris. "For, if not, I don't see how the matter is to proceed any further. You may expect to see us return peacefully together after a short while."

"God grant it!" said mother. "But above all things remember not to alarm my poor husband, for that would be the worst policy of all."

"I shall be most careful, madame," said our little Sherlock Holmes, and with this assurance he departed, well provided with introductions to friends in London in case he should need assistance of any kind in his dealings with Englishmen, whose language he knew little of. He was well supplied with cash, too, and carried instructions to keep us well informed as to his movements, and especially as to my poor father's mental condition and all that concerned him.

For a few days after Boris's departure my mother was sanguine and excited, expecting I know not what good news from London, for naturally she knew whatever could be reasonably awaited for some little while. Boris would and could do nothing immediately after his arrival there. His task, in the nature of it and in accordance with his instructions, necessitated the greatest caution and deliberation—nothing was to be done in a hurry for fear of causing suspicion and inspiring alarm.

A week passed, and there was no news from our little detective; a second went by and still he had not written, excepting a short note to report his arrival in London, written two or three days after reaching English shores.

Then mother began to grow despondent. There must be a hitch somewhere, she said. Poor dear father had flitted from the holdings to which Percy had traced him, and Boris had lost the scent.

"Never fear, mother, dearest," I assured her. "Boris is on his mettle. His reputation is at stake; he will take good care to strike the scene somewhere and somehow."

"I don't know. I have a feeling of depression," said mother. "I do not feel so sanguine as I did that the man Percy found is really and truly my own Vladimir, your dear father. The photograph is very like him. I admit, though when one examines it through a magnifying glass, it appears less so than with the eye alone. It would be so dreadful now that our hopes have been raised, if he should prove to be some one else—some one with a strange, though a very strong and undoubted resemblance to father."

"But, dearest," I said, "if this photo so resembles father that both you and I, the two people on earth who know and love him best, instantly agreed that this must be he and no other, how unlikely it is that any one else can possibly be so like him as to take us both in. It must be father. I did not believe it myself until I saw the photo, because I could not understand why—I mean I could not reconcile father's secret disappearance with his character as I know and love it, but now I am convinced in spite of myself."

"The face looks coarser and more weather beaten and haggard through the magnifying glass," said mother. "See for yourself!"

I looked and at once I understood what mother meant. There were lines of care or hard living, or what not. The temples looked taller than father's and the stubby beard he wore appeared strangely vulgar after father's carefully shaven chin. I said guardedly that this was so.

CHAPTER IX.
THE COUNT'S CRIMINAL BROTHER.

There was a great surprise for me at first, in my mother's reception of the news, which it fell to Percy and myself to convey to her, that Percy, while in London, had seen one whom he believed to be my father, and had even photographed him and found out the home in which he was living. She fell on her knees and thanked God aloud for his mercies.

"I knew, I knew that my beloved was alive and that God would return him to us in his good time!" she sobbed. "You have seen him alive, dear Percy, and that is enough—the rest will all be clear one day, when my dear husband is restored to himself again—and to me. He has been poorly of late, Boris, but I never suspected that the malady was of this type, until—until that terrible day of his disappearance. I have feared that in some horrid spasm of temporary irresponsibility he might have—but God is merciful—he has been seen alive, all will be well!"

My poor dear mother laughed and cried, and cried and laughed again. She looked at the little photos and kissed them and said, "Oh, yes, there can be little doubt—but oh, poor dear, what a terrible suit of clothes and hat! Do you know what I think, Boris? The new tariffs have made a great difference of late in the profits of his iron works. He has been haunted by the idea that one day we shall be ruined, and this specter has driven him, for a little while, out of his senses, so that he has run away, poor dear soul, and dressed himself meanly in order to disguise himself from some imaginary creditors! Did he recognize and speak to you, Percy?"

"No, he did not, countess," said Percy dejectedly.

"There, it is all of a piece!" cried the mother. "He desires to remain disguised and unrecognized. I see it all, oh, how plainly!"

Dear, sanguine mother, raised from misery to great happiness upon so rich a basis! How could she guess that she was settling down, in fancied security and comfort, in the Spanish castle of the sanguine and credulous, commonly called the paradise of fools?

Did I, too, take up my abode in this fool's paradise? I fear I must confess that I did. My mother's confidence infected me, and I felt as sure of father's identity with the man of the portrait as she did.

Boris was radiant.

"It only remains, then, to travel to London and bring him back, whether he will or no," he said.

But mother demurred.

"I do not think that," she said. "I should not like him interfered with. He will even outlive this temporary attack of delusion and return of his own free will. I am sure of it. The count is not mad. His intellect is sound and healthy as any. But he is ill. To trouble him in his present condition would do him no good. He would think himself pursued, and this would give color to the delusion from which he is suffering. Let him be watched if you like, but by no means allow him to be startled or his liberty interfered with."

Accordingly it was settled that Boris—who was unknown to my father—should be the one to undertake the duty of watching him. He must settle himself close—opposite if possible—to father's lodgings, which were in a small street off Fitzroy square, and keep an eye upon the count's movements, using his discretion as to making his acquaintance or not, according to circumstances.
